

CAPTAIN QWARK (Ratchet & Clank, 2002) a very tall humanoid

CAPTAIN QWARK (Ratchet & Clank, 2002) a very tall humanoid bipedal with a big chin and three-fingered hands. Goofy personality.

Marlene (Last of Us, 2013), a serious human woman with long dark hair and a sharp mind.

Booker DeWitt (BioShock Infinite, 2013), a brutish human man with a rough-around-the-edges personality.

*SPOILER WARNING - KEY PLOT EVENTS FROM THE ABOVE GAMES ARE REFERENCED TO BUT NOT REVEALED.

CAPTAIN QWARK (Ratchet & Clank, 2002) a very tall humanoid

INT. EVENING - THE DOWNTRODDEN HOTEL

CAPTAIN QWARK (30s), dressed in his favorite green jumpsuit, enters a futuristic hotel that appears normal to him but cartoonish to us.

CAPTAIN QWARK

Well, isn't this a swanky place.
But why isn't there anyone here to receive me?

He looks around. The lobby, shining with chrome and riddled with adverts for the latest futuristic hygiene gadgets, is empty. Qwark sighs, then perks up as he sees something.

CAPTAIN QWARK

Well, THERE'S a handsome devil who can help me!

He's found a mirror behind the hotel reception desk. To his left the elevator up arrows have lit up. A single elevator dings and its doors open. There's no one inside. Quark looks around. It seems the elevator's meant for him.

CAPTAIN QWARK

Well, Captain, it's not like this can get any worse. You've been beaten by Ratchet and his oil-leaking friend again. Not to mention you still have that rash from the Hygienator...might as well take the lift.

CUT TO: INT. HOTEL ELEVATOR

The elevator is full of mirrors. He checks his chin, tries to straighten his bent antenna, and winces at his burns, bruises, and tired appearance.

CAPTAIN QWARK

You're still the great Captain
Qwark! Believe in yourself, man!

The elevator dings again. It only went one floor up. The doors reveal a dingy, dark space with scant sunlight. MARLENE (30s, holding her hand over a gunshot wound) stands in a lobby that's flooded and worn down by time. There appears to be something growing up the walls.

CAPTAIN QWARK (Ratchet & Clank, 2002) a very tall humanoid

CAPTAIN QWARK

Good galaxies, you looked surprised to see me! I'm Captain Qwark, hero of the-

MARLENE

(wincing)

Why so loud and proud about it?
Move.

Qwark shifts, looks around, and fiddles with his fingers.
The elevator closes. Marlene frowns.

MARLENE

I didn't hit a button. Did you?

CAPTAIN QWARK

Where I'm from, these things go when you step on.

MARLENE

And where I'm from, these don't work anymore.

(She mutters)

Nothing works anymore.

The elevator dings. Another lobby opens before them. Beyond the windows is not a street, but the clouds. BOOKER DEWITT (40s), looks over from the bar, where he's nursing a drink, and comes over.

BOOKER

Well ain't this the strangest thing
I've seen.

MARLENE

Just get on. We're all going to the same place.

BOOKER

And that is, miss?

MARLENE

Marlene. And it's taking us to...wherever people like us go when we're done.

Booker enters the elevator, which now feels very cramped.

BOOKER

Jesus, you both look like hell.

CAPTAIN QWARK (Ratchet & Clank, 2002) a very tall humanoid

CAPTAIN QWARK

You don't understand. I just keep trying and trying, but that Lombax keeps knocking me down.

BOOKER

I get it. More than you know. We all got debts to pay and the world don't forgive.

CAPTAIN QWARK

It's all just so unfair!

BOOKER

I've seen strange things. Walked through windows to other worlds. Watched myself live other lives... But I never been on a lift heading to...nowhere? Heaven? Hell?

The elevator screeches to a halt.

MARLENE

Definitely hell. Maybe I wouldn't be here if I'd done things differently.

BOOKER

Trust me, Marlene, it all ends up the same. Lives, lived, has lived. Dies, died, has died.

MARLENE

So...what's the point? All that struggle? All that pain?Qwark, don't you cry on me.

CAPTAIN QWARK

But you're getting somewhere.

BOOKER

Truth is, this lift's taking us nowhere.

MARLENE

Oh, Jesus.

BOOKER

What is it, miss? Your wound?

MARLENE

No, no. We're here for a reason. Look at us. Beaten down. Stabbed in the back or made the fall guy.

CAPTAIN QWARK (Ratchet & Clank, 2002) a very tall humanoid

We're...

CAPTAIN QWARK
(Gasps)
No! I'm a hero!

MARLENE
No, you're not. I'm not. That's the point. Aren't you tired of fooling yourself?

BOOKER
Damn straight. I'm tired of being my own worst enemy.

CAPTAIN QWARK
And I...Well, I guess I'm tired of pretending to be a hero.

There's quiet again. Captain Qwark hugs Marlene. She doesn't refuse. Booker crosses his arms until Marlene pulls him in. Captain Qwark cries loudly. Marlene, bitterly. Booker, silently. The elevator doesn't move.

MARLENE
I feel good. Shot in the gut, but good.

BOOKER
I guess it ain't so bad being the bad guy...if you're not alone in the end.

CAPTAIN QWARK
Okay! Great! Now that we've had our self-realization-psychology-thingy, will this spirit elevator let us go?

The elevator refuses to budge. They are stuck. Qwark eyes the mirror.

CAPTAIN QWARK
At least I still have my looks...

Booker and Marlene groan. They wonder if they're trapped there, with each other, forever. Truth is...they are.

CUT TO:

THE END.